What's New in the Move Windows?

Install Move Windows using the built in Help/About item. Next, you will need the XMoveWindow script from my GitHub repository. Download and unzip the latest version of XMoveWindow in /usr/local/lib/xmv/. Move Windows to primary screen and maximize with a single click. With a single click you can move all the opened windows to the primary screen and maximize them. All you need is a single click. To move all the windows to the primary screen, double click on the XMoveWindow script. After you double click on the script, all the opened windows will be displayed on the primary screen. Click on the maximize button on the right side of the XMoveWindow screen. The XMoveWindow will be moved to the primary screen and maximize with a single click. After the maximization, you can exit the script by double clicking on the exit button. Note: If the maximization button is not displayed in the XMoveWindow screen, you can always press the Meta + I keyboard combination to maximize the window. Support for the pop up configuration screen is currently available. After you install the XMoveWindow package with the instructions above, you can minimize or move all the opened windows to the primary screen with a single click. Of course, this can only be used in the super user mode. I have recently tried the script in Parrot. If you want to test it, send me an e-mail at Also, try to use the following procedure. The bug is the following. The XMoveWindow script is supposed to be able to maximize or move all the windows to the primary screen. But the pop up configuration options doesn't work. It should ask for an input after the script is executed. But it does not work that way. Here is the output of the script:

root@parrot:~#./XMoveWindow Input the # if the XMoveWindow script is going to be moved to the primary screen.
