History The company was started when Jonathan Chetoskey found a white marble quarry on the mountain behind Chetoskey. This marble was not properly chipped and was too difficult to quarry. He purchased a foundry in 1880, which is where the Chetoskey Stone Company began its operations. Organization and management Charles Sherwood, son of Jonathan Chetoskey, was the foreman of the foundry. Under him was Jacob Hart, Charles Ritter, Peter V. Roebuck, James Kline, Edwin Ritter, and Otto Lutz. There were seventeen other employees, each being responsible for a different type of operations. Products and use By 1887 the foundry was selling railroad granite and marble. In 1888 the company was the largest marble quarry in the United States. By 1891 the company was producing railroad bricks and bluestone. In 1892 the company constructed a rolling mill to produce railroad granite. By 1896 the company was producing railroad and water stones. During its operation, the Chetoskey Stone Company was the largest foundry in the United States.
