
on a phrase from Jack Strawson's book titled "Logic and Philosophy" which is commonly used and advocated for: mathematics in practice. It's not that she's wrong, or that Strawson is, but rather that I think we must be just a bit more discerning about how we use words like "natural." I'm not sure the author intended to be cavalier about anything, but if you read her book, it seems to be a book 570a42141b
