Turkey sees western sanctions against Syria as unjustified ANKARA - Hürriyet Daily News DHA photo Turkey is critical of the western sanctions against Syria and sees the situation in Syria as an internal one, acting as a means to wage political war, the Foreign Ministry's press office said. "Turkey has not recognized the legitimacy of these measures. It is one of the countries which has taken in refugees of the Syrian people and has undertaken the most in humanitarian aid to the country." "As a matter of principle, we have always maintained our stand that this is an internal Syrian issue and the only country which can intervene in it is the Syrian government and people." "We have a long-standing tradition of maintaining good relations with all countries, and we can express our feelings on this issue in the appropriate manner," the statement added. It went on to note that the Syrian government's wish to impose an economic siege on the country should be considered in its entirety. The statement continued: "We believe that sanctions should be imposed on any country whose policies do not meet the principles we seek in accordance with the United Nations Security Council."
