CONTROLS Player Intelligence technology helps players make the right decisions at the right time and help them excel in the game. Playing In the tactical view, players maintain control through the center by passing and shooting accurately with one-touch passing or setting up goals by pressing the SQUARE button, allowing the player to utilize the pitch as their field of vision. Passing is another way to maintain control of the pitch. To pass, the player touches the ball while holding the stick in the direction they are passing to, and also touches the ball again after passing and holding it in the target area (radius of two meters). Players can also perform a backwards pass when the ball is moved backwards by pressing up on the directional pad or the CUE button. Pressing the PASS button selects pass types: one-touch pass, quick pass, short pass, step-up pass, press the ball pass and slide pass. To finish a pass, hold the ball and press the PASS button again. In FIFA 21, the approach to passing was to perform a short pass while running in a straight line but in FIFA 22, a player can perform one-touch passes or quick passes while running in a straight line. Quick passes, while running, are executed by holding the pass button (which is to the left of the SHIFT button), aiming a short pass on the run by holding the SHIFT button, and releasing the pass by releasing the pass button. To shoot a player performs a short pass and can shoot from either inside or outside of the area (radius of four meters). Performing a long pass as a player approaches the goal is also possible. In FIFA 21, one-touch or quick passes could be performed in the central area, but in FIFA 22, passes are performed whether or not the area has been entered. Quick passes are short passes but they allow the ball to bounce off the first touch and be accurate in the goal. One-touch and quick passes are all performed by holding the pass button, holding the SHIFT button and releasing the pass button. In FIFA 21, the slide pass was performed with quick passes and was restricted to the central area. In FIFA 22, the slide pass can be performed from both inside and outside the area. The step-up pass is a combination pass that is very similar to a short pass and can be performed when a player is running toward the goal by holding the pass button, holding the SHIFT button and releasing the pass button
