If your computer is infected, which is the best way to remove it? Answer: Power MP3 Cutter 6.5 keygen is the best answer to this question. Download the best anti-virus software now from the Praktik Review site. Introduction With the recent release of Windows Vista and Windows 7, the demand for OS-level security is increasing. Virus writers have taken this as an opportunity and released new worm malware, Trojans, and Rootkits to target the new operating systems. While the security of the OS is improved, in this article, I will show you how to protect your PC from malware. Discover the difference between the security of your computer using Windows XP vs. Windows Vista. Lets take a look at some of the security features and tools included in the operating system. Why do I need to protect my PC? Viruses that target Windows operating systems are written by the same people who write worm malware. Worm malware are designed to infect many computers in a particular area and then perform some specific action. Examples of some worm malware are Nimda, Blaster and Win32/Worm. Viruses are written by people who want to gain access to your system. They are usually written to steal money or spy on your system. Viruses will typically change system settings, download files, or change how your computer works. What can I do to protect my PC from these attacks? 1 Define your security requirements When you set your system to "high" security mode, you are basically turning off the feature that allows people to install software on your system. You could also turn off the ability to let other people use your account to log in to the system. However, this is not always a practical solution. For example, many software programs have to be installed to work. While you may not want other people to use your computer, you should want the right people to be able to install and use the programs you have. 2 Install the correct antivirus software Windows XP does not have a built-in antivirus software program, so we have to install one
