Q: Passing a list to a For Loop? I have a list of ini files I am iterating over with:

import os.path
from os.path import join
for key, value in os.walk('.'):
    for files in os.listdir(join(value, 'x.ini')):
        for line in files:
            print(line)
```

I would like to do something similar to:

import os.path
from os.path import join
for key, value in os.walk('.'):
    for files in os.listdir(join(value, 'x.ini')):
        for line in files:
            temp = files

Is it possible to achieve this? If so, how?

A: You could declare a variable at the beginning of your loop and assign to it as you go, or just create a new list at the end:

files = []
for key, value in os.walk('.'):
    for files in os.listdir(join(value, 'x.ini')):
        for
```

line in files: print(line) files = [] 1.
