Acetylcholine release from myenteric neurones of guinea-pig ileum: a depolarization-induced calcium release mechanism. Acetylcholine release from myenteric neurones of guinea-pig ileum was investigated using a calcium-deficient bathing medium. Acetylcholine release was elicited by electrical field stimulation. Raising the K+ concentration of the bathing medium to 10 mM increased the electrically induced acetylcholine release. This concentration-dependent release was accompanied by an increase in intracellular calcium concentration. The calcium ionophore A23187 induced a concomitant release of acetylcholine and increase in intracellular calcium level, whereas the addition of verapamil or nifedipine did not affect the electrically induced acetylcholine release. Thus the acetylcholine release due to the increase of [Ca<sup>2+</sup>]<sub>i</sub> induced by raising the K+ concentration was suggested to be different from the Ca<sup>2+</sup>-dependent, voltage-sensitive mechanism. These results indicate that some type of calcium-deficient medium and electrical field stimulation promote the acetylcholine release by activating the same calcium-dependent mechanism in myenteric neurones. Panthers (1-0) @ Jaguars (0-1) 11:00 pm Eastern (Pac-12 Network) The Panthers have been waiting for a game like this for years. Steve Wilks, their head coach, even admitted after the Seahawks game that this is a matchup they really didn't want to be facing. And then the Panthers took a 23-3 lead on the way to a 42-17 thrashing of their AFC South rivals. This week, the Panthers have a home date with the Jacksonville Jaguars (nobody named that team in P.C.!). It looks like a major mismatch in every way. The Jaguars looked terrible in every way against the Steelers. Jacksonville's offense was outscored 12
