during world war i, the british army took up the song "onward christian soldiers" and the soldiers would sing this song and then finish with "singing in the trenches." the song was sung by the troops in the trenches during world war i. one soldier recalled, "we knew we had been transported into hell by the sound of it. but it is a thing that we could not put down. we had to keep singing it." when they sang the song in the trenches, the words were "onward christian soldiers" and "soldiers of christ, arise." the words changed when the troops moved to a rest area. the song was changed to "singing in the trenches" and "singing in the trenches." in the middle of his studies, his mother fell ill and died. her death took its toll on him and he was soon back to his old ways. he would listen to the radio and would improvise and mimic whatever he heard on the airwaves. as his repertoire expanded, he also started to play in the local pubs and clubs and attracted a lot of interest. he was a bit of a showman, but it was not until he discovered that he could sing that he became really popular. when he was a young man, he decided to visit the world's great music capitals and it was then that he discovered that he had a real talent for singing. he found that people were very interested in hearing him and that his songs were selling well. he decided to give it a go and to sing professionally. he was a hit and would often be booked to sing in the most famous venues in the united states. the manager of one of his biggest hits was impressed enough to offer him a recording contract. he decided to give it a try and he made two records that were critically well received. he was soon inundated with offers from the major labels. he then moved to new york, where he took the title role in a Broadway musical and became a huge star.

the army didn't really care what songs they sang as long as the troops sang. this was no mere coincidence. the ctca was inspired by the work of the world war i british war artist, ivon hitchens. hitchens had been commissioned by the government to paint images of the war. he was commissioned to do two images, "the journey" and "the end." the journey was a story of an allied soldier (hitchens) and his journey in the trenches. the final scene of the painting depicts the allied soldiers singing "onward christian soldiers" and "jesus christ, lead us not into temptation." the painting was later purchased by the u.s. government for $4,200. this gave the army a basic framework of what the ctca wanted to accomplish. the military council of the ctca considered that the songs would be sung by the troops in two ways: in the trenches and during breaks. songs played on radios in soldiers camps and at rest billeting were not considered relevant. the focus was on developing a regular singing army. this was reflected in the importance of the singing camps held in the summer of 1917. the camps were not sing-alongs, but the soldiers were responsible for learning and then singing the songs at any rest billeting. this is reflected in the lyrics of the song "onward christian soldiers." "the church bells in ancient alexandria were ringing out their message of peace. for the mighty engine of war was slowly coming to rest." the song certainly promotes peace and harmony, but there is another meaning to "onward christian soldiers." in the trenches, the allies used the song as a call to arms. the germans also used the song to instill discipline. they began to sing, "onward christian soldiers" as a call to arms at the start of world war i.
