Read more The paper is arranged as follows: in Section 2, the geometrical modeling of the shell-shaped projectile is described. Differential geometry-based definition of the surfaces and normals is derived here. Section 3 contains approximation of the induced surface current on object and formulation of the scattered field and RCS. Numerical results are presented in Section 4.

Finally, concluding remarks are given in Section 5. This paper presents the implementation and validation of a tau-leaping algorithm for the population dynamics of a metapopulation model of a microbe exploring host and non-host surfaces. The mathematical model of the metapopulation is presented in the form of a system of differential equations representing the population growth dynamics, the movement of the bacterium and the interactions between the two species. This model is based on a two-group scheme: 1) bacterial group and 2) non-host group. Part of the validation consists in comparing numerical simulations with experimental data from the literature. Other validation tests are based on implementing other tau-leaping algorithms and on numerical and experimental models.
