It can be used to select an area of a document—for example, to correct some non-existent blemish, or to draw around what you need to select. It works best in a single, layered image, but it may also be used on an eight or nine layered image—if the user is careful. Use your mouse pointer to grab the Lasso tool, then drag, and to choose a cutting tool (affecting all layers except the open image), press and release on the left button, and drag.
